Animals in disguise

Do you know what (1) ……..….. is? Well, it' s a way to hide from others by using different colors, patterns, and textures and (2) ……. the surroundings. Animals use different ways to disguise themselves to hide from their predators. The Arctic fox changes its fur as the seasons change. In the winter, its coat becomes white, so it can blend the snow. In spring, it becomes a brownish gray so it can (3) ……..

Zebras use a different kind of color camouflage. Rather than blending in with their surroundings, when they are in (4)....., they create a confusing pattern for their predator, the lion, so it doesn' t know where to attack! Chameleons can produce a large (5)..... and also many different patterns on their skin. However , their main reason for doing this is not to hide from anything but to (6)……..... their mood. A (7)..... chameleon and an angry chameleon will turn two completely different colors .

The (8)..... is a very funny insect because it doesn' t look like one at all. It actually looks like a twig. This disguise is quite effective because even though its predators can see it, they ignore it because they think that it' s a tree branch.
