Pet behaviourist

| | |
|---|---|
| | it can be difficult to get to the bottom of what causes this behaviour – which is where a pet behaviourist comes in.Pet behaviourists spend time with a pet, |
| | assessing their unusual behaviour (perhaps at home or out on a walk), to help the owners work on rectifying it. In doing so, they often strengthen the bond between pet and owner – making both much happier.While some people prefer to study a degree in animal behaviour, |
| | others prefer to apply for a job working closely with animals (for example, in a dog kennel or animal rescue centre) and train on the job.You could also start by gaining voluntary experience with an animal charity – |
| | If you love animals, then becoming a pet behaviourist is a fantastic way to spend more time with the world's furry friends |
| | which will give you a chance to talk to people in the industry and find out more about whether it's the right career for you! |
| | whilst getting to know them from the inside out.For many people, having a lovable companion is fun and problem-free, but it can become a worry if they start to exhibit strange behaviour. And because animals can't speak to us and tell us what's going on, |
