Concern is growing about a 30-year-old man who has been missing from his San Diego, California home for more than a week. It seems that Raul Sanchez was last seen when he left his office at around six p.m. last Thursday. According to his wife, he did not return home that evening. Mr. Sanchez's credit cards and cell phone do not appear to have been used since Thursday and his sudden disappearance is apparently completely out of character. Furthermore, there are said to be several inconsistencies in his wife's version of events, and the police are continuing to question her. It has been suggested by neighbors that the couple's relationship may have broken down in recent months.
