"In most cultures, it's normal for women to work with young children."
(Sophia, Greece)

"Teaching isn't a very well-paid job."
(Tom, US)

More men teach older children, but even at secondary school level, the majority of teachers are women. Do children need more male teachers?

"My favourite teacher at school was a man.
His lessons were more fun, more interesting."
(Steve, UK)

"Boys can easily talk to a male teacher about their problems."
(Rahul, India)

The UK and US governments want more men to become teachers. But why is it a good job for a man? Simon teaches at a primary school in London. He works with seven and eight year olds.

"I love my job. The children are such fun, they say some really funny things. The best thing about the job is watching the children learn new things. Every day is different. The working hours are okay, I go into school at about eight in the morning and I get home about five. The holidays are really good, especially the long break in the summer."
