8 What does Wilfred say about men?

9 What does Mr. Stone see Mrs. Wynnes doing?

Wilfred continued in a snobbish way, "While many men may feel fear, they will not show it because they have that extra bit of self-control[1] that women don't have. It's that extra self-control that makes all the difference."

Mr. Charles Stone, the American, did not join in the discussion. He preferred to listen and watch the facial expressions[2] of Mrs. Wynnes and the guests. At that moment, he saw a strange expression come over Mrs. Wynnes' face. "Hm," he thought to himself, "I wonder what's on her mind."

Mr. Stone noticed Mrs. Wynnes slightly turn to the servant standing next to her. She spoke quietly to him. She was hardly moving her lips. The servant's eyes opened wide in shock and he quickly left the room.
