History tours in BOSTON!

Boston is in the north-east of the U.S., in an area called New England. It is very important in U.S. history because the American Revolution started there.

The first Europeans arrived in Boston from the U.K. in 1620, and built the town in 1630. Boston soon became an important trading center. In those days, Americans were British citizens and paid taxes to the U.K. But many Americans were against these taxes. In 1773, some British ships carrying tea arrived in Boston. The citizens decided not to pay the tax on the tea. Instead, they threw the tea into the ocean. This event is called the Boston Tea Party and helped start the American Revolution. The U.S. eventually became independent from the U.K. in 1783. Every year, Bostonians celebrate the Tea Party on December 16th. They wear 18th-century clothes and throw tea into the ocean.

Because of Boston's history and importance, there are some fascinating city tours such as the Tea Party Tour—a great experience for tourists, young and old. You can even throw some tea into the ocean!

Great fun, but freezing cold! ★★★★★

We went on a Tea Party Tour last December. The tour started at The Old South Meeting House at two o'clock. A strange man arrived. His clothes were from about 300 years ago—an old black hat and funny short pants. He was our tour guide! We walked to the harbor and he told us about the American Revolution and why the Tea Party was important. My sister thought it was a real tea party, and she asked some silly questions! Next, we visited an old ship in the harbor. After that, we threw big boxes of tea into the ocean—and at other people. Finally, we bought some tea for my grandparents. It was great fun!
