There are four people talking about effective learning methods, including lectures, self-paced learning, group discussions, and interactive activities. Decide whose opinion matches the statements below. Read the texts and complete the questions below.

Sofia

Running my own business is exciting, but it keeps me on my toes. I need a way to learn new skills that fits around my crazy schedule. Traditional classes just wouldn't work for me. Flexibility is key!

David

In my teaching career, I always strived to create rich learning experiences for my students. Now, in retirement, I have the time to delve deeper into historical topics that always fascinated me. Lectures by renowned experts and in-depth reading materials are ideal for this stage in my life.

Maria

College is all about expanding your knowledge, but for me, it's also about the social interaction. Learning alongside classmates and participating in discussions helps me understand the material better. Bouncing ideas off each other and hearing different perspectives really solidifies my learning.

Liam

A new business deal in a foreign country? Exciting! But I need to be able to communicate effectively, and fast. Lectures and textbooks won't cut it this time. I need a method that's focused on practical conversation and gets me up to speed quickly. Time is money, you know?

1. Lectures are the most effective way to learn new information.

2. The ability to work on learning materials at my own pace is essential.

3. Discussing ideas with classmates helps me solidify my understanding.

4. Interactive exercises and activities make learning more engaging.
