Dear John,

I am writing you from Barcelona. I'm having a good time here because the city celebrates La Mercè Festival. A part from visiting the city I have seen some of the festival activities.

In the morning I saw how people create "human towers". People climb up and stand on each other's shoulders. Then a little child climb up to the very top and raise the hand as a sign that the tower is right.

In the afternoon I saw the "parade of the giants", where a big figures carried by a person spin and dance with the music of a band. Children look at them fascinated.

At the evening I saw the "fire run" where a group of devils shower the spectators with sparks from fireworks attached to them.

At night I will go to see the closing event of the festival, the fireworks display in the magic fountain of Montjuïc.

Love,

Sarah
