SCENE-2

(A month is over. The courtiers are waiting eagerly for Tenali to bring in his paintings. They are smiling and whispering to each other.)

Raja : So, What do we do today?

1st courtier : Sir, the day has arrived when Tenali Raman shows you his paintings.

Raja : Where is he? It's late and almost time for my lunch.

2nd courtier : Perhaps he's so busy with his painting that he has lost track of the days.

3rd courtier : Perhaps his painting is so good that he can't bear to part with it.

Raja : Well, I can't wait anymore. Somebody should go to his house and tell him that he has lost his bet and the bag of gold.

4th courtier : It's only fair that if he doesn't make good his boast, he should pay a penalty. I feel he should pay the court a bag of gold.

1st courtier : Indeed , yes. I agree, Sir, that should be done.

3rd courtier : Ah, there he is. He seems to have brought it. But it is covered with cloth.

(Tenali comes in with two men carrying a painting covered with a sheet of cloth. When Tenali gestures, the men lifted the cloth to display an empty canvas. The painting has only a few curved strokes of black on the right hand edge and a few green lines at the bottom below it.)

Tenali : Good afternoon, Sir. See what a beautiful horse I have drawn. It's a magnificent black stallion with a white star on its forehead. Look at the polished leather saddle on it. Hmm, I wonder if I should have the reins trail like that.
