Reporter: So, you were swimming when the sunfish appeared. You _____ absolutely terrified when you saw something that big in the water.
Swimmer: _____. I was surprised, but I wasn't terrified.
Reporter: Really? I assume you thought it was a shark at first.
Swimmer: _____. It moved very slowly, so I knew it wasn't a shark.
Reporter: Interesting. _____your heart started racing the moment you noticed it.
Swimmer: _____, yes. My heart beat faster, but more because I was excited than scared.
Reporter: _____the most frightening moment of your life.
Swimmer: _____. In a way, it was one of the most peaceful moments I've ever experienced.
Reporter: Peaceful? _____the other swimmers were screaming and trying to get out of the water.
Swimmer: _____. Some people were shocked, but no one was really panicking.
Reporter: _____you tried to swim away immediately.
Swimmer: _____. I actually stayed still and watched it.
Reporter: _____worried it would attack you.
Swimmer:_____. Sunfish are harmless.
Reporter: _____you felt regret afterward for staying so close.
Swimmer: Absolutely not. _____, I felt lucky. It's not every day you see a creature like that.
Reporter: So _____been a negative experience overall.
Swimmer: _____. To an extent, it was overwhelming, but mostly it was unforgettable and beautiful.
Reporter: _____you'll never forget that day.
Swimmer: That's true. _____, it changed the way I see the ocean. Now I respect it even more.
