Last summer, Jake and his sister Emma visited a small island with a long and interesting historical background. Many people believe that strange creatures still inhabit the forests there. On their first evening, while they were walking near an old lighthouse, they suddenly heard someone whisper their names. Emma felt nervous, but Jake tried not to show that he was afraid.

The next morning, they decided to explore deeper into the forest. As they were climbing over rocks, Jake had to scramble up a steep hill to reach a better view. From the top, they saw the lighthouse again. At that moment, a tall man appeared from behind the trees and beckoned them to come closer.

Emma was too frightened to move, but Jake insisted that they should at least listen to what the man wanted. When they approached him, he explained that he was a local guide and that he had been waiting for visitors. Later, the two teenagers laughed about how scared they had been and promised not to let their imagination control them again.
