Adolf Hitler

Adolf Hitler, Chancellor of Germany and leader of the Nazi Party, has been known as a racist. He believed that large groups of people are different from each other and he felt that races have certain characteristics determined by genetics. This was one of his core political ideas and it increased his hatred toward other races.

Adolf Hitler was born in April, 1889 in a small Austrian town near the German border. The outbreak of the First World War provided him with an opportunity to serve in the German army and he became German. In the years after World War I, Germany was very unstable. Hitler entered politics and gave many passionate speeches that blamed Germany's problems on Jewish people. They became the main target of his hate.

In 1933, Hitler gained power of the German government. Once in power he started racist policies against Jewish people. His policies soon turned into genocide during his time. He killed 11 million people and 6 million of them were Jewish. He was seldom satisfied with ruling only Germany. He invaded Czechoslovakia in 1938. Shortly after that, he invaded Poland. Following this, most of the developed countries in the world joined together to oppose him. This was how World War II began. During World War II, Hitler took over most of Europe before the Allies finally defeated him.
