Grammar*B. Grammar****Indirect Questions*****

Indirect questions are more formal and polite than direct questions. They begin with phrases such as Do you know. Their word order is

Phrase	+	Question word	+	Subject	+	Verb?
Do you know		where		the post office		is?
Could you tell me		how far		it		is?

Direct questions	Indirect questions
Where does he live?	Do you know where he lives?
Who are they?	Could you tell me who they are?
Why is she crying?	Can you tell me why she is crying?
When does the plane arrive?	Do you know when the plane arrives?
Where can I park my car?	Could you tell me where I can park my car?

*** Use if when there is no question word.

Did she pass her driving test? → Do you know if she passed her driving test?

Note!

We usually use indirect questions for asking for direction in case of polite way of asking strangers.

Backpacking—Now and Then

Backpacking became very popular in the 1960s, especially in Europe and the United States. It is an inexpensive way to travel. It is usually associated with adventure and a search for new experiences. You find backpackers everywhere you travel: from the tea-growing slopes in Sri Lanka to the steep cliffs of Machu Picchu in Peru. Backpackers have one thing in common—they all look exhausted.

It's not surprising they are tired because backpacks can be huge! The backpacks of the 1960s were actually about the size of one's back. They had a large metal frame outside. Nowadays, people choose more comfortable backpacks, with a size that varies to meet their needs.

The original idea behind backpacking was to travel light and to pack as little as possible: a change of clothes, a map, some food and medicine, a roll mattress, and maybe a Swiss knife. Nowadays, people ask, "How much can I carry with me?"

Do you know how else backpacking has changed? What has changed the most is the use of technology. In the past, backpackers' contact with their families was limited to the occasional postcard or spending a lot of money on a telephone call. Nowadays, backpackers can talk to family and friends on their cell phone from the middle of the Amazon jungle, or get connected at an Internet café.

However, some destinations have not changed. For example, the old Silk Road is still very popular for trekking. It connected Europe with Central Asia and China for centuries. Nepal is another popular route to this day. Hundreds of backpackers trek along the Kathmandu Valley, carrying their homes on their backs.

Answer true or false

1. _____ Backpacking is cheap and exciting.
2. _____ Backpackers all look bright and energetic.
3. _____ People want to carry as little as they can in their backpacks today.
4. _____ Backpackers can keep in touch with their families because of technology
5. _____ The Silk Road is no longer popular with backpackers.
