Hi everyone!

What are you doing this Christmas? I've decided to watch a bunch of Christmas movies this year. As you know I'm a planning freak so of course I won't just watch some random films. I've actually done some research on the topic and discovered that there are hundreds of Christmas movies for any mood you might be in. I want to tell you about eight which I really want to check out this Christmas break.

Movie 1: ____

I'm going to start with a film that has been called the best, a classic, the greatest etc. It's quite a lot to live up to, don't you think? It's the oldest film on my list and the story looks to me like the opposite of "A Christmas Carol", in which the main character sees the consequences of his bad actions.

Movie 2: ____

This one looks very promising! There are lots of different storylines and everything is supposed to be very Christmassy so I'm hopeful. The only thing I worry about is the fact that people have very conflicting feelings about this film. I wonder how I will feel about it.

Movie 3: ____

I'm ashamed to say I've never actually seen it. I know quite a lot of you are surprised but I have nothing to defend myself with. The film is advertised as charming and feel-good on the one hand and full of violence on the other so I'm quite confused. I promise I will watch it till the very end, which, by the way, is supposed to be amazing.

Movie 4: ____

I think I've seen a sequel of this film but never the original so it's time to see how it all started. It doesn't seem like a Christmas movie but who knows? Sometimes the most unexpected and action-packed stories might turn out to be feel-good classics.

Movie 5: ____

When I saw a poster for this film with the main character wearing a ridiculous green outfit, I was very sceptical. But a Christmas movie doesn't have to be realistic, right? I expect it to be full of situational humour and this is something I enjoy a lot. And it's something I can watch with all my little cousins that I'll be babysitting, so fingers crossed!

Movie 6: ____

This one is reviewed as a modern take on a Christmas classic so I'm quite hopeful. They say it has a lot of black humour and is not a traditional Christmas film. I've never seen anything like that before so I'm curious.

Movie 7: ____

This is another dark comedy on my list. The description of what kind of person the main character is has made me wonder how on earth this could be something families would watch at Christmas. I guess I will find out!

Movie 8: ____

This is a film I've heard about a lot but never really got to watch. I don't know why but sometimes when people say: "You've got to see this!", it makes me not want to see it. But I promise to see it and tell you why I dislike it. Just kidding! I hope I will like it. Sometimes, you just want something that will surely end well in spite of all the complications.

Have you seen any of the films on my list? What else should I check out? Write in the comments. And I promise I will let you know what I think about the eight films I'm planning to watch. Till next time!
