Young as I am, I'm a realist, and I know it's absolutely [1]_____ to have humility when starting out in the working world. I knew my first job after university was [2]_____ to be neither easy nor personally rewarding. I knew that it may [3]_____ be my [4]_____ to carry out menial tasks. But it's worse than I foresaw. First of all, we're [5]_____ to work 12-hour shifts; at the interview they said this was highly [6]_____ except during holiday periods. Physically, I don't have the [7]_____ to work 60-hour weeks. Secondly, I'm translating documents from English to French, Spanish and Japanese – and the only one of those I am [8]_____ of translating into competently is Japanese. Finally, we're [9]_____ to take a lunch break away from the premises, we are only [10]_____ to eat outside in the courtyard. All this will [11]_____ lead to me quitting. I think there's a strong [12]_____ that it will affect my long-term health. Frankly, I'm not willing to risk that.
