This is Kim. She's Australian. She doesn't go to school because there isn't a school where she lives. Australia is a very big country and she lives on a sheep farm hundreds of kilometres from a town.

Kim studies at home. She's got books, pens and pencils but her lessons are on the computer. Every morning Kim sits in front of her computer for an hour and watches and listens to her lessons. Her teachers use cameras and interactive whiteboards. She can talk to her teacher and the other students in her class. In the afternoon, Kim does her homework. She emails her homework to her teachers.

A lot of children live on farms and study at home in Australia. Kim has got lots of online friends. Kim and her friends text and make video calls. Once a year they meet at a school in Port Macquarie and stay for a week. The students go on trips and there's also a Sports Day. It's a great week and it's the only time Kim sees the other students.
