LIVEWORKSHEETS

READING 2 (Items 5–10) (6 marks)

Read the text. Then complete the task.

In fact, every family today has a TV, almost more than one. People everywhere spend hours watching it, however, a few families choose not to have a TV because they think there are many disadvantages to have one.

To live without a TV has certainly got its advantages. The first one is that families spend more time talking to each other. Secondly, they spend more time doing different creative things such as reading, writing, playing board games or painting. Thirdly, they spend more time outdoors, and therefore they are usually fit.

On the other hand, there are also disadvantages. For example, children who don't have a TV may feel different from their school friends, and often won't know what they are talking about. Also, it's not true that all TV programmes are bad. There are good ones, like documentaries, and people who live without a TV may know less about what's happening in the world.

In conclusion, although living without a TV has some advantages, I think today it's unrealistic and we should try to turn the TV off when there is nothing good on.
