THE FUTURE OF TOURISM

I do not belong to those 1..... A. critiques B. critics C. criticisms D. enthusiasts of tourism who, 2..... A. since B. because C. owing D. due to its negative consequences, would like to limit it drastically or even abolish it altogether, though I do have some sympathy for such 3..... A. utter B.cruel C. severe D. crude reactions. Tourism can sometimes be devastating, inhuman and selfdestructive. I must admit that 4..... A like B. alike C. as D. such as. a scientist I am often tempted to see my duty in the 5..... A. prevention B. conservation C. preservation D. avoidance of tourism rather than in its improvement. I cannot observe the worldwide effects of tourism without great 6..... A. care B. caution C. attention D. concern , nor can I help being disappointed at the lack of positive action aimed at improving the current state of 7..... A. affairs B. stuff C. being D. matters despite many useful proposals. But it is simply not true that the only alternative to present-day tourism is no tourism 8..... A. above all B. at all C. of all D. all around . There are other possibilities. For many people – not 9..... A. last B. less C. least D. latest for both tourists and their hosts – tourism is of vital importance and we must therefore pursue a positive goal and defend travel. But it can be done with a clear 10.

.....A. consciousness B. Cautiousness C. conscience D. conscientiousness only if tourism changes, if it improves. Recent analysis has shown very clearly: things cannot go on in this way. Those who live as tourists and those who live 11..... A. off B. on C. from D. upon tourists must become aware of the fact and accept a new hierarchy of 12..... A. merits B. virtues C. valuables D. values . Their common goal must be to develop and promote new forms of tourism, which will bring the greatest possible benefit to all the Involved B. included C. busy D. integrated in tourism. It is important to realize that tourism has been created for people and not the other way 17..... A. on B. across C. back D. round . Human development should be the primary aim: human virtues, social abilities and a moral world-view the guiding principles.

These demands are by 18..... A. all means B. no means C. any means D. every means new, but they have so far been ignored. The resolutions, recommendations and studies that have been published by many institutions and authors in recent years all 19..... A. make B. do C. have D. give the same call for a new orientation in tourist policies. However, such theories will 20..... A. keep B. stay C. remain D. continue politically anaemic as long as there is no pressure on politicians from the general public. Only when people refuse to accept and cooperate will practical policies and the reality change. What we need, then, are rebellious tourists and rebellious locals.

There are developments in this area, which give more than a 21..... A. beam B. ray C. flash D.twinkle of hope. There is the general change in social values and the trend towards morehumanity in everyday life, which holds a promise for the humanisation of travel as well. With this in the background, the 22..... A. procession B. proceeding C. process D. procedure of emancipation of tourists will make further progress: the manipulated tourist will gradually be replaced by increasingly informed, critical and mature tourists, people who 23..... A. respond B. reply C. answer D. retort , react and participate. And finally, the changing attitudes in the population of tourist destination areas are an important new force. There is a growing awareness of the problems that tourism creates, a growing self-confidence and a stronger will for selfdetermined development.

Anyone who really wants to change the travel system should keep in mind what is feasible:

24…… A. like so B. thus C. as follows D. just so I am not proposing the dismantling of the system but its slow transformation, undertaken step-by-step. Changes can and must get
