The largest aquarium in Europe

There are many places called aquariums where people can go and see ocean and sea life. One of those is the Oceanogràfic, which is in Valencia in Spain. The aquarium is inside the City of Arts and Science. There are nine underwater towers which look like they are from a science-fiction film. Many people go there not only to look at the fish and other sea animals but also to admire the beautiful buildings. The Oceanogràfic is the largest aquarium in Europe, but it hasn't got the biggest fish tank. The biggest one here (7 million litres) isn't as big as the one in Boulogne-sur-Mer in France, which is the largest in Europe (10 million litres).

As visitors walk through the water towers, they can see over 500 different types of ocean and sea animals, including dolphins, sharks, penguins, turtles and many, many others. The total number of animals in the aquarium is about 45,000. The place has even got the oceanic sunfish, which you can't see very often in aquariums. Each tower has got two parts, and each part shows one of the big ecosystems in the world, for example the Arctic or the tropical seas.

1 How many underwater towers are there in the Oceanogràfic?

There are _____.

2 What can people admire in the Oceanogràfic apart from the sea animals?
