A Legend About the Discovery of Fire

Prometheus was the favourite of Zeus, the father of the gods. He formed creatures with his hands. He breathed new life into them and taught them to use their hands and use their minds. Thanks to Prometheus, humans built houses, cities and ships, and they cultivated the fields. But Zeus was afraid that these people would get too powerful and he did not permit Prometheus and all the gods to give the fire to them. But clever Prometheus loved humans and really wanted to give them the fire. He lit a torch at Helios´ sparking chariot and brought the fire to the people. When Zeus saw that he swore revenge to the humans. He sent many incurable diseases, the plague and fever. Zeus punished Prometheus for his crime, too. He was chained to a rock where he had to stay without food and drink for many centuries. Then it was Heracles, the son of Zeus, who broke the chains of Prometheus and gave him back his freedom.
