Community Gardens

Growing a community garden can be a rewarding experience that can benefit people in many ways. On an individual level, gardening helps reduce stress and ease tension. Just being out in the sunshine and digging in dirt can be fun.

A community garden brings a neighborhood together, too. People are often working in the garden at the same time, which builds relationships. People share tools while they share stories, creating a unique community experience.

When it is harvest time, people can share and exchange produce so that everyone has a good variety of food. Every city should have areas blocked off for communities to grow their own vegetables.
