TYPICAL DAILY ACTIVITIES AND DUTIES

Working on the front line of patient care means they are always interacting with people who are in stressful situations, so nurses need to be empathetic and work well under pressure.

They also have to react appropriately to emergencies and unexpected events, so good problem-solving skills and quick thinking are both ideal qualities for nurses.

SPEAKING: ROUTINE ABOUT JOB

You have to write and expose a text describing a professional's routine related to your profession for five minutes individually. Similar to the example.

I`m the Head Porter in this hospital.

What do I do? Well. I run the place.

Porters do more than just push food trolleys around the hospital. We transport patient by wheelchair or stretcher from the wards to Radiology or Physiotherapy and back again.

We remove dead bodies to the mortuary. We lift and carry heavy equipment and furniture, and we dispose of all the waste. Each hospital bed produces 4.5 kilo of waste every day. We collect it each day and take it away for recycling.

We deliver the post all over the hospital and bring letters for patients - that's a very important thing. As we move around the place, we take files, samples, and specimens from here to there and back again

To do all things a porter must be polite and friendly.
