Reading

1 Listen and read. Match the titles to the newspaper articles.

Ocean diver dies!

MOVIE STAR GOES BACK TO SCHOOL

Shark in Sydney!

Children were swimming in the ocean when they saw the animal.

Yesterday afternoon, lots of children were swimming in the ocean at City Beach. They ran out of the water onto the beach.

While the children were playing, a man was diving in the ocean. He had a camera and he took this picture. He said, "It wasn't a dangerous shark. It was a dolphin!"

Steve Irwin was diving when he died. On September 4th, 2006, the TV star was making a movie about stingrays in a coral reef in Australia. While he was making the movie, he was diving in the ocean. He was wearing his wetsuit while he was swimming. He was watching a stingray when the fish stung him in the heart. Steve's friend said, "He died while he was doing his favorite thing."

Children were playing on their school playground when the actor Zac Efron walked in. On Tuesday morning at recess, the children from Zac's old school in California were playing when the famous movie star came. Zac was staying with his parents when he visited the school.

Everybody wanted to meet the star and talk to him. "It was amazing," one boy said. "All my friends were running around and shouting his name."

2 Answer the questions.

1 Which animal is more dangerous, a dolphin or a stingray?

2 What was Steve Irwin's favorite thing?

3 Which star lives in the United States?

4 Why were the children from Zac Efron's school on the playground?

5 Which newspaper article is the most interesting? Why?

Workbook page 38

LIVEWORKSHEETS