SECOND QUARTERLY ASSESSMENT
DISCIPLINE AND IDEAS IN THE APPLIED SOCIAL SCIENCES 12
Prepared by: Mr. Julian Carlos Carig

Name: _____ Score: _____/70_____

Grade and Section: _____ Date: _____

I. True or False. Write TRUE if the statement is correct and FALSE, if otherwise. (15 points)

____1. Sociologists, psychologists, economists, anthropologists, political scientists, geographers, and others who study human society and interpersonal relationships scientifically are known as interpretivist social scientists.

____2. Positivist Social Scientists: Positivist social scientists follow positivist principles, which support using empirical observations, measurable measurements, and methodical application of scientific methodologies to examine social phenomena. Special emphasis is placed on objectivity and the capacity to validate findings.

____3. In social science, we consider that social phenomena are complex and subjective. We emphasize the need to understand human behavior via interpretation, contextual analysis, and meaning analysis. To explore these subtleties, we frequently use qualitative research methods.

____4. The study of human societies, cultures, and their development is known as economics. It covers a wide range of topics, including societal structures, conventions, belief systems, and traditional practices. It typically involves extensive fieldwork and comparative analyses.

____5. As a social science, anthropology focuses on the complex interactions between the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services. It also studies how people, organizations, and governments react to financial incentives and constraints in their local contexts.

____6. The discipline of history is the methodical study of the physical landscapes, habitats, and human-environment interactions on Earth. This includes the research of human and environmental processes, spatial relationships, and cartographic representations.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

____7. In order to gain insight into human progress, societal development, and cultural transformations, geography involves the scholarly examination of past events, civilizations, societies, and individual experiences. This examination is frequently conducted through the analysis of historical records, artifacts, and diverse sources.

____8. In psychology, there is to a set of rules that are imposed by the state to control social behavior and relationships. It provides a framework for resolving conflicts, maintaining social order, and defending justice ideals within a society.

____9. In terms of phonetics, syntax, semantics, and the study of language in social situations, history is a scientific investigation into the structure, evolution, variety, and use of languages in various cultural contexts and societal settings.

____10. Through the lenses of empirical research, experimental studies, and clinical applications, law functions as the methodical study of human mental processes and behaviors. It probes into cognitive functions, emotional experiences, developmental processes, personality dynamics, and mental health issues.

____11. In addition to examining how political institutions operate, behavioral patterns, ideological frameworks, and the underlying dynamics of political processes within various societies, sociology also explores political systems, governance mechanisms, power dynamics, and the formulation of public policies.

____12. Studying societal structures, interpersonal relationships, institutional frameworks, and processes of societal transformation is known as political science. It addresses issues like identity formation, cultural dynamics, societal organization, patterns of inequality, and the behaviors of communities and social groups in the larger context of society.

____13 .Only those social workers who are competent now or who want to become competent in the future should take on responsibility or employment.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

____14. It is important for social workers to continuously enhance their professional practice and function execution skills. Social workers must to evaluate new information pertinent to social work critically and stay up to date on it. It is recommended that social workers regularly engage in professional literature reviews and continuing education related to social work ethics and practice.

____15. Social workers ought to base their practice on accepted information, such as knowledge derived from empirical research that is pertinent to social work and social work morals.

II. Enumerate what are being asked in each of the following items. (10 points)

Social Workers' ethical responsibilities as professional

16.
17.
18.
19.
20.

Core functions of Social Workers

21.
22.
23.
24.
25.

Identify what kind of counselling in an organization does the following statement belongs.

26. The counselors provides information to the client. _____
27. The counselor plays an active role._____
28. Integrates the ideas of both participants. _____
29. It does not make decision. _____
30. It explains the problem to the counselee and recommends solution. _____

LIVEWORKSHEETS

III. Assume that you're a Social Worker, propose a program and explain it in 3-5 to resolve the given societal issues below: (10 points)

31-35. In a quiet town where happiness used to be common, a dark cloud loomed over the people because of a mental health crisis that was spreading. Even though they tried hard, the residents felt stuck in feelings of sadness and hopelessness, unable to find real solutions to the increasing mental struggles. Each day felt gloomier than the last as the burden of untreated mental health problems weighed heavily on everyone already tired from the battle. The town's services were overwhelmed, not able to give the needed help and care to all those suffering. The strong connections that once held the community together started to weaken under the pressure of a crisis they couldn't solve. Leaders, once looked up to for guidance, felt powerless against such a sneaky and widespread problem. With each plea for help left unheard, the community felt lost in a confusing mix of emotions, without a way to find their path forward.

36-40. In the quiet town of Eldridge, nestled among hills and trees, people felt uneasy. They sensed unfairness all around, like a thick fog that wouldn't go away. Some groups in the town, like minorities, felt left out and ignored. Even though they asked for things to get better, nobody seemed to care much. Meetings where they talked about their problems just made them feel more frustrated. Every new day brought a little hope, but then things went back to feeling hopeless. Eldridge showed how unfair things can be in society, and the people there didn't know how to fix it. They kept going, though, trying to stay strong in a tough world.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Choose 2 branches of Social Science and draw symbolism relevant to the chosen branches. (10 points)

RUBRICS:

Criteria	Description	Excellent (3)	Good (2)	Needs Improvement (1)
Creativity	Originality and innovative use of ideas and concepts.	Demonstrates exceptional originality and innovation	Shows creativity with some original ideas	Shows limited creativity
Technique	Skillful execution of drawing techniques and tools.	Exceptional use of various techniques	Proficient use of techniques with skill	Limited understanding and application of techniques
Composition	Thoughtful arrangement of elements within the drawing.	Well-balanced and engaging arrangement of elements	Generally good composition with minor flaws	Composition lacks balance and focus

LIVEWORKSHEETS

IV. Essay. Answer the following in 3 – 5 sentences. (20 points)

51. – 54. How important is confidentiality in the client-counsellor relationship?(4 points)

55. – 58. How do personal values and beliefs impact the therapeutic process in counseling? (4 points)

59. – 62. How does advocating for social justice and equality align with the core values of social work? (4 points)

63. – 66. Why is it important for social workers to actively listen to clients' narratives and perspectives, and how does this practice contribute to building trust and fostering therapeutic relationships? (4 points)

67. – 70. Why is it important for social workers to engage in ongoing professional development and training, and how can this continuous learning enhance their skills, knowledge, and effectiveness in supporting clients with diverse needs? (4 points)

LIVEWORKSHEETS

 END OF EXAM ***

LIVEWORKSHEETS