SP pr

I first heared about Project Water in school. In our Geography class, I watched a documentary about the problems caused by shortages of clean water in South Sudan, and I couldn't believe the hardships that ^ P T people there faced, all because . didn't have clean water readily available: It really make an impression SP on me how much we take things like this for granted here. The documntary mentioned that there was a summer volunteer programme, and I immediately knew that this was something I was interested in. I had wo A done charity work before, but this was my time first volunteering in another country. In a end, I spent three weeks in Juba, in South Sudan.
