Hey guys! Yesterday was a great day! I went to the natural history museum with my science teacher. We went by bus from our school.

At the museum, there was a map of the rooms for each of us to decide what to see. There were so many things - it was hard to choose! My friend Luke and I went to the room with the dinosaur bones. Dinosaurs are our favourite animal. The dinosaur fossils were so big! It was amazing to stand under them.

1. They decided what they wanted to see. True False

2. They didn't like standing under the dinosaurs. True False

Camels are desert animals with one or two humps, long legs and a long neck. There are two types of camels: dromedaries and Bactrian camels. Dromedary camels live in the Middle East and Africa. They have one hump. Bactrian camels live in Central Asia. They have two humps.

Camels can go for days or even months without drinking water. For a long time, people thought that there was water in camel's humps. Actually, a camel's hump is fat. Camels keep water throughout their bodies. That's why they don't need to drink very much. Cameñs can go for a long time without water, but they do need water from time to time. When a camel is thirsty, it can drink 200 litres of water!

3. Camels carry water inside their humps True False

4. Camels don't need to drink water every day True False
