James's Summer Adventure

James had always lived in the city, surrounded by tall buildings, busy roads, and bright lights. He had never spent much time in the countryside, but this summer, his parents decided to send him to his uncle's farm in a small village.

At first, James didn't like it. The village was too quiet, and there was no internet. He missed playing video games and chatting with his friends. However, after a few days, he started to see the beauty of nature. The air was fresh, the fields were green, and the river nearby was perfect for swimming.

One day, his uncle asked him to help take care of the animals. James fed the chickens, collected eggs, and even helped milk a cow. He learned that farm life was much harder than he had thought.

One evening, James and his cousins decided to explore the nearby forest. They walked for hours, picking wild berries and enjoying the sounds of birds. Suddenly, they realized that they had walked too far and didn't know how to get back. James remembered what his uncle had told him: «If you ever get lost, follow the river. It will lead you home.» Following this advice, they found their way back just before it got dark.

By the end of the summer, James didn't want to leave. He had made new friends, learned new skills, and discovered that he actually enjoyed life outside the city. He promised his uncle he would return next year.
