Conan: Hey, Sherry! Remember our Bukit Bintang trip? That night view still blows my mind.
Sherry: Hey, Conan! Of course! The city lights with the stars? So [_____]. I heard it's one of the best spots nearby because it's high up and surrounded by nature.
Conan: Totally. The [_____], cool air felt like a mini-vacation from the city chaos. But man, that path was like a ninja obstacle course in the dark, so uneven and pitch black!
Sherry: Seriously! I was half-expecting to bump into a wild animal or two. We definitely need flashlights next time. Someone said the government should put up some lights or handrails... but who knows if that will happen soon.
Conan: And there weren't any benches or shelters, so if it rained we'd be stuck. Great for adventure lovers, but not so [_____] for just hanging out.
Sherry: Haha, yeah. But honestly, I loved how [_____] it was. No big crowds, just nature and silence, kinda like our secret hideout.
Conan: Exactly. Plus, it's easy enough to get there by motorbike or bus. Though, parking was a pain. We ended up walking like marathon runners just to reach the spot.
Sherry: Right? My legs still complain!
Conan: But honestly, it's still worth it. Perfect way to escape campus stress.
Sherry: For sure. Next time, we just need to bring better flashlights, some snacks, and maybe a foldable chair.
Conan: And I'll bring bug spray—pretty sure those insects are waiting for us!
Sherry: [laughs] Good call! Maybe we can also suggest some safety improvements to the local tourism office without taking away the natural feel.
Conan: Sounds perfect! I'm already [_____] for our next trip!
