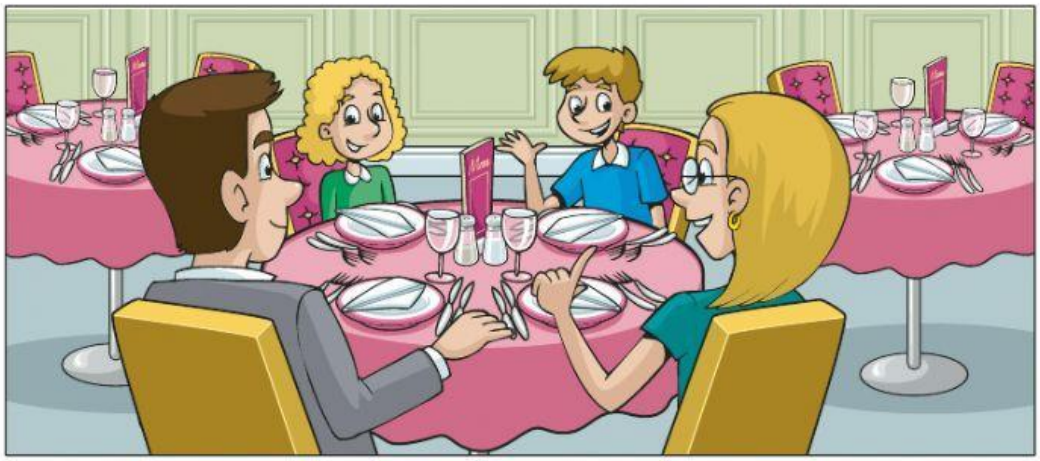
Presents for everyone



Last week Mum, Michael and Julia went shopping together to buy something for Dad. They needed to buy a present for him, for his birthday on Saturday. They walked round all the sports shops in the town centre but didn't get anything. After an hour they decided to go to different shops. Julia went to the bookshop. Mum went to the clothes shop and Michael went to a computer shop.

Dad likes books about gardens but there weren't any new ones. Then Julia saw a book about Mum's favourite artist and she had to buy it for her.

Mum didn't like the shirts and sweaters in the clothes shop. They didn't have the colours that Dad usually likes. But she saw some lovely jackets and bought one for Michael. Michael couldn't find anything for Dad in the computer shop but he did see the game that Julia really wanted to play.

When they met again later, Mum said 'Oh no, it's Dad's birthday and we have nothing for him!'

Then Mum had an idea.

'Let's take Dad to the new shopping centre on Saturday – he can choose the things he likes and then we can take him for dinner in the restaurant there.'

Dad loved his day, he found lots of things he liked in the shops and the food in the restaurant was delicious.
