The Night Adventure

Last ----------, my friends and I went on a camping trip that I will never forget. We planned to spend two nights in the hills near our town. The weather was warm and sunny, and we were all excited. On the first afternoon, we put up our tents near a small river and cooked some food on a fire. After we finished eating, we decided to explore a ----------cave that our teacher had told us about.
We walked carefully towards the entrance of the cave. It was colder ----------than it was outside, and we could hear water dripping from the rocks. My friend Tom said, "I can't ----------how big this cave is!" We moved ----------because the ground was wet and sometimes slippery. After a few ----------, we heard a strange sound. At first, we all stopped talking. Then, we saw ----------bats flying around above our heads. They weren't scary, but we didn't want to disturb them, so we walked quietly.

Deeper inside, we found a huge rock that looked like a chair. We all sat on it and laughed. My friend Emma wanted to take a photo, but it was too dark. She ----------to use her torch, but the batteries didn't work. After walking around for a while, we finally decided to go back ----------again because it was getting late. When we reached the tents, the sky was turning orange and the moon was just starting to rise. We sat together, drank hot chocolate, and talked about our adventure. It was one of the most exciting days of my life, and I hoped we could go back to explore more caves in the future.

PART 5- The Winter Camping Trip

Last winter, three friends—Sam, Lily, and Mark—decided to go on a weekend camping trip in the hills near their town. They had all been camping before, but they had never tried camping in the snow. Sam thought it would be exciting, Lily thought it would be beautiful, and Mark just wanted to take photos of the winter landscapes. Early on Saturday morning, they met at Sam's house. Lily brought a large rucksack full of food, Mark carried a camera, and Sam packed a small tent. They also brought a torch because they knew it would get dark early.

The walk up the hills was harder than they expected. The ground was slippery, and they had to stop several times to rest. When they reached a high place, they saw the river below them, almost completely frozen. Lily was amazed because she had never seen the river look like that before. After climbing up the last part of the hill, they found a flat space to put up their tent. It took them almost an hour because the wind was strong, and their hands were cold. When they finally finished, they sat together and ate some biscuits and fruit from Lily's rucksack.

In the afternoon, they explored the area. They found a small cave with strange marks on the walls. Mark took photos, and Lily whispered that maybe animals had made them. Sam laughed and said the marks might be from people who visited long ago. When they returned to their tent, the sky was already turning dark blue. They made a small fire and talked while they watched the moon rise over the snowy hills.

During the night, the wind grew stronger and woke Sam up. He listened carefully and heard something moving outside the tent. Feeling frightened, he woke the others. Mark used the torch to look around, but there was nothing there—only snow blowing across the ground. They laughed softly and tried to sleep again.

The next morning, the weather was calm. They packed their things and walked back down the hills. Even though the trip had been cold and sometimes scary, they all agreed that it was an amazing experience. They decided they would go camping again in the spring, when the weather would be warmer.

1. Lily carried a large _____ full of food.
2. The river below them looked _____.
3. It took almost an hour to put up the tent because _____.
4. Inside the cave, they saw _____.
5. Sam woke the others because he _____.
6. Mark looked around the tent using _____.
7. They planned to go camping again in _____.
