KENSUKE'S KINGDOM

A SHORT SUMMARY OF CHAPTER 4

Order these events in the order they took place.

- The exploration is a failure: he cannot find any fresh water, the fruit is out of reach, and the forest feels incredibly dangerous. He hears all kinds of noises.
- After being knocked off the Peggy Sue during the night storm, Michael fights to stay afloat in the pitch-black ocean.
- Michael shouts "Thank you!".
- While gathering firewood, Michael has a close encounter with a large, ginger-brown orangutan.
- Michael spends hours trying to use a piece of broken glass to catch the sun and make fire.
- Michael spends his first night inside a cave where he is attacked by loads of mosquitoes.
- He sings "Ten Green Bottles" not to fall asleep and to cheer him up.
- Michael wakes up on a white sand beach, next to Stella Artois.
- Desperate for food and fresh water, Michael decides to explore the dense jungle behind the beach.
- The next morning, Michael wakes up weak, cold, and desperately thirsty. He discovers Stella drinking noisily from a bowl.
- He has finally managed to get a small fire when an old and thin Japanese man appears and shouts "Dameda! Dameda!". The man puts out the fire and divides the island into two. He is not friendly at all.
- Next to her, someone has left: a bowl of fresh water, dozens of grilled fish, and red bananas.

LIVEWORKSHEETS