DINING IN THE DARK

Many restaurants these days offer some theme or attraction to get	X warm, paying bodies into seats. One current trend that has been	been appeared is having lunch or dinner in total blackness. Many people believe in that our senses — especially those related to eating, taste and smell — are heightened when the sight is taken away.
The whole idea might also be a bit of scary, which some customers find attractive. Some locations offer it complete darkness, while others utilize blindfolds. However, most do not allow for any belongings that create light, such as cell phones or cameras, or not smoking.
Additionally enough, if you don't have plans to visit one of the all-dark restaurants, you could look for a local restaurant which offers a 'dining in the dark' event. As many restaurants are hosting such events every so often to attract few customers. Examples include in the 'dark dining' experience at Catharsis, which is in Miami, or Camaje Bistro in New York City's Greenwich Village.
