

Classification of Law by Mac Iver.

	It defines and explains the structure of government and the relationships between the various organs of the government in a nation.
	Opposite to National Law. It regulates the conduct and relations of various statuses in the world.
	A part of Positive Law and formulated by the authority of a state and applicable to the people living within its territorial jurisdiction.
	is considered divine law. It is not written anywhere; it is found in the minds of men. It is abstract and not created by any human agency or authority. It is opposite to Positive Law.
	The law according to which the people in a state, are governed is called ordinary law. It includes all the municipal laws excluding the constitutional law. It is divided into Public and Private Law.
	Positive law is called as political law. It is created by human agency. It is written in nature. It is concrete and can be understood as it is sovereign power of the state. It is determinate and its violation leads to punishment.
	It deals with the relations between one individual and another. It covers matters such as defamation, property, marriage, inheritance etc.
	deals with relations between the individuals and the state. It covers all forms of crime. In cases involving public law, the state is a party to the case.

Constitutional Law

International Law

Positive Law

Public Law

Private Law

Ordinary Law

Natural Law

National Law

