*Spanish merinos sheep in Australia

What makes Australia rich?

Australia is a rich country, and life there is good. Where does its money come from? Sheep, cattle, minerals, wheat, fruit and wine are the answers.

Sheep is very important for the country. Most Australian sheep are Spanish merinos sheep*. People first brought them to Australia in 1797 from Spain. Merinos are strong animals and they can live happily in dry places and deserts. Now 20% of the world's sheep live in Australia, and 25% of the world's wool comes from Australia.

Cattle in Australia

Cattle live mainly in the north of Australia. Australian cow - farms are called " cattle stations". Different countries all over the world buy meat from Australian cattle stations

Gold made Australia rich in the nineteenth century. After that oil, silver and other minerals brought millions of dollars for Australia. Not everyone is happy about this, because when people dig for minerals they often destroy the land.

* wheat

The USA, China and Japan buy a lot of wheat* from Australia. The country grows other food, too, for example bananas and in the south, where it is less hot, apples. Australia makes a very good wine too.
