III. Read and choose the best answer

Lions are the largest of all African cats. They live in African grasslands and in the northwest of India. Lions form social groups that are called prides; a pride include five females, two males and their young. Male and female lions are quite different: female lions are smaller, male lions have got a thick, woolly mane of fur around their face and on their neck; the mane is useful to protect lions' throats in battle. Lions are carnivores, they eat zebras, buffalos, reptiles, hares; they usually eat their pride all at once. They are excellent swimmers. Lions hunt when the time is cool and dark. Females give birth to cubs after four months. Lions live for 30 years in captivity and 15 years in the wild.
