NAME: _____

CONVENTIONS VERB MOODS

The mood of a verb expresses the attitude of the writer or speaker. Three verb moods used in English are: indicative mood, which expresses a statement of fact, or that something is happening in reality; the imperative mood, which expresses a request or command; and the interrogative mood, which expresses a question.

A. DIRECTIONS: Classify each sentence by writing indicative, interrogative, or imperative.

1. _____ Corey has a dog, two cats, and a parakeet.
2. _____ Which one is her favorite pet?
3. _____ Watch him play with the toy fire truck.
4. _____ Both cats were adopted from the city shelter.
5. _____ Clean up after dinner.

B. DIRECTIONS: Classify each sentence by writing indicative, interrogative, or imperative. Then, add the correct end punctuation.

1. _____ Will your grandfather run in the marathon this year _____
2. _____ This room is too small for our meeting _____
3. _____ What kinds of birds make the best pets _____
4. _____ Get out on that soccer field right now _____
5. _____ Mark asked a question about the exam _____

C. DIRECTIONS: Rewrite each sentence according to the instructions in parentheses. Be sure to use correct end punctuation in your new sentences.

Example: That scarf was made in Hong Kong. (Rewrite as an interrogative sentence.)

Rewritten: Was that scarf made in Hong Kong?

1. Does the coach treat all the players fairly? (Rewrite as an indicative sentence.)

2. Will you wait for me by the stage door? (Rewrite as an imperative sentence.)

3. Heidi will compete in the spelling bee. (Rewrite as an interrogative sentence.)
