I am at the university at this very moment, I am sitting on my chair and a lot of my classmates are chatting while the teacher is speaking, but I am writing this text right now to tell you about the love of my life. He doesn't know anything about me, but I see him everyday at the university. Now, for instance, as I am putting these words on paper, I'm looking at him across from the classroom. He is studying and I am pretending do the same, but to be honest I can't even pay attention to what the teacher is saying. Her mouth is moving, but there is no sound, only this noise in my brain and the butterflies in my stomach. My heart is beating so fast and my skin is sweating. My fingers are holding the pencil but just barely: why am I so silly and sentimental?

I don't know many things about him, only that his name is John, he is 24 years old and that he is Irish. He plays football twice a week with our classmates. Actually, now some boys are standing up and approaching to invite him to the next match on Tuesday. It's quite obvious that he's a sportsman because he has very wide shoulders and strong legs. Oh boy, how I wish I could watch this game!

Now my friends Lisa and Sarah are telling me to talk to him, but I think they are crazy! They always make fun of me because I'm too much in love with a person who doesn't even know my name. I think they may be right, but I can't do anything about it... I just love John!
