Mom Shares Her Struggles...

[Transcript]

[Daughter] What kinds of jobs did you have since first _____ in the country?

[Mother] We _____ gardeners, and we were cleaning offices.

I _____ the offices.

You remember that? We had the night shift cleaning. That's why, you know, we had to take you and your brother. I didn't have a _____.

I have _____ of running into everyone's office and eating candy from their candy dishes. I remember being with my brother in our pajamas with the little plastic feet. And I also remember you would _____ buy us a Cup-a-Noodle from the vending machine. Like a snack and then put us to bed on people's office couches, and then you'd carry us to the car when you guys were _____ cleaning the offices. I remember that. Did they ever know? Did your bosses ever know that you took your kids?

No, I don't _____ so.

Is there anything that you've _____ told me but want to tell me now?

When we first came here, we _____ through a lot of things like not eating. I guess, for six months, your father lost his job and we never told you that.

I do remember a lot of _____, bean tacos.

But when you ask us, "Why the same thing?" _____?

Yeah.

I _____ to tell you why.

If you could do everything again, would you _____ me differently?

I would dedicate more _____, I guess. I was so busy going to school, too, that I guess I neglected you _____.

No. For me, watching you go to school with two kids and trying to make ends meet, that was the _____ inspiration for me to finish college. I thought, there's nothing that could stand in my way that didn't stand in yours more. So it's the most important thing for me having gone to _____. And I feel like anything I do from here on out is okay because I've already achieved my _____. Everything else is _____.
