

Organize the conversation. Drag the phrases and drop them in the blank boxes.

B: They're interested in playing soccer or football, playing volleyball, or even swimming.

A: I'm excited because you're here. I have a couple of questions. Firstly, are teenagers more efficient in school when they have a hobby?

B: According to our recent surveys in 20 high schools, they love watching movies and reading literary books. Not many teenagers love playing or practicing an orchestral instrument, but they love practicing sports.

A: And, what sports are they interested in?

B: There isn't enough information to say that that's true, but it does make them happier. When teenagers have a hobby they love, their social circle expands and they learn new skills.

A: I hope that my teenage child is listening to this podcast. This information is useful, Marylin. Thanks for being here today!

B: That's an interesting question, Tas. There are many hobbies that help teenager's focus like playing boardgames or even reading. Recent studies show that podcasts are also great for focus. Teenagers train their ears to listen to important details.

B: I'm great, Tas. And you?

A: Today's main topic is hobbies. Psychologist Marylin is here. She gives self-improvement talks in high schools. Hi, Marylin! How are you?

B: Sure, any time!

A: That's very interesting, Marylin. Next question, what do teenagers love doing these days?

A: Finally, what hobbies help to have a better focus?

1.

2.

3.

4.

5.

6.

7.

8.

--

9.

--

10.

--

11.

--

12.

--