

Answer the questions below.

Your answers will show that you understand the BMI calculator project.

1. You will finish each stage of the development cycle to finish the project.

   A. True B. False

2. A calculator is a small electronic device with a keyboard and visual display used for making mathematical calculations.

   A: True B: False

3. In this project, you will create a BMI index calculator program.

   A: True B: False

4. To meet the basic requirements for the project program, you will need to use variables and advanced programming constructs such as compound conditionals.

   A: True B: False

5. To complete the advanced challenges, you will need to use a casting command and a range of compound conditionals.

   A: True B: False

LIVEWORKSHEETS