Introduce to the pedagogical module 2

1. This is a conversation between Jan from Quito and Kevin from Pintag. Complete the dialogues by using the words in the box.

Audio
Listen to the dialogue.

Audio:

pollution are town sick air

Jan: Hey, Kevin. How you doing?

Kevin: ¿I am OK, and you? You look pale.

Jan: Yes, I am - You know the weather changes so hard and quickly, and there is lots of pollution near my house. So, my doctor said all those things provoke allergies, and that is what I have now.

Kevin: I am so sorry to hear that. I on the other hand feel very good.

I can breathe fresh -.....-, the food we eat is the one that is what my grandparents cultivate so it is organic and doesn't have any chemicals. Another advantage is that in my home town, there are not so many cars so there is very little - Jan: ¡You are right! Your lifestyle is healthier, but I really like living in Quito. I have transportation means, a lot of malls, cinemas and even hospitals.

Kevin: Well to each his own. I don't want to change my beautiful -.....---for any place else.

2. Listen to a conversation between a father and son. In your notebook, write down the advantage of living in the country and the advantages of living in the city.

Audio.

Script: This is a conversation between a father and a son.

Father: Ohhh! How I love my town! I have all I need. If I am hungry, I just leave my house and have different fruit trees. I can take any fruit, fresh and free of chemicals and eat it. I can breathe fresh air, and I have my animals to take care. They are my entertainment, and they provide us with our food. I never feel stressed.

Son: I would like to say the same dad, but I would like to live in the city. I have a friend, and his dad lives in the capital. My friend says that his father takes a bus to commute, and he is going to buy a car. He doesn't have to walk long distances. He has internet, and he can communicate with anybody around the world. He also has nice clothes, and every week he can go to the hospital for a checkup. He is very stressed though.

Father: I know, I understand what you mean. You are young, and all that sounds really good. But as you said, he has a lot of problems, so he suffers from stress which is not good. I am sure he has to pay a rent, and this must be expensive. He must work more in order to pay for transportation, food, clothes, etc., and he must miss his family.

Son: I got your point.

Must or Have to?

MUST	HAVE TO
Is personal. We use it to express personal feelings. It's used for present and future, not for past. "I must go home now" (I say it's necessary)	Is impersonal. We don't use it for feelings, but for facts. It's used in all forms. "I have to tidy my bedroom. My mum wants me to." (Mum says it's necessary)

MUSTN'T	DON'T HAVE TO
It's a prohibition. It's necessary that you do NOT do something. "You mustn't smoke in a hospital"	It expresses lack of necessity. It's not necessary for you to do something. "You don't have to wear a uniform in this school."

Complete with MUST or HAVE TO in the correct tense (sometimes both are possible):
