Two friends in their late twenties, Brady and Pablo, are talking. Fill in the blank in their conversation with whatever, whichever, whoever, or however and correct forms of the indicated verbs. You will use some of these words more than once.

Pablo: What's the matter with you lately? You seem really down in the dumps.

Brady: I don't know. I'm just not very happy. Take girls, for example.

whoever I meet bores me. I'd like to meet some new and interesting people.

1. (I/meet)

Pablo: What about work? Doesn't that satisfy you?

Brady: Nah, I've been there so long that I can do _____, but there is no challenge anymore. Right now there are five major projects the company is doing. My boss tells me to work on _____ the most. The trouble is, none of them interest me.

2. (I/want)

3. (one/interest me)

Pablo: Why don't you try doing some volunteer work? That's what I do- I go down to the community center and work with _____ on that day. You get your

4. (need/help)

mind off yourself when you're volunteering.

Brady: What kind of things do you do?

Pablo: Sometimes I just sit and talk to old people. Sometimes I umpire a baseball game. Sometimes I help a kid with his homework. I do _____.

5. (I/can)

Brady: How much time do you have to put in, say, every week?

Pablo: You can put in _____. There are no rules on that.

6. (much/time/you/want)

Brady: Okay, so what do I do?

Pablo: Just go down to the community center some evening. Talk to _____

7. (be) at the main desk. Say you're there to help. You'll do _____.

8. (need/to be done)

Brady: Ok, I'll give it a try. Helping other might cheer me up. What's the address?

LIVEWORKSHEETS