My Job Shadow Day by Mark Thomson

Job Shadow Day is a free programme for students who want to have some work experience before they make a decision about their future job. I took part in it last week and I really enjoyed it!

First, my school gave me a list of different places I could visit. I decided to choose a local hospital. My parents were happy to give me their permission and I went to St Mary's Hospital in London for a whole day, together with two other classmates.

There we met Jim, a doctor who works there. He told us what his day usually looks like and then we all went to meet his patients. Jim talked to them and answered their questions. Then he showed us how a body scanner works. It was really exciting and very educational!

I know that one day isn't enough to show you what the job of a doctor is really like. However, I think it gave me a better chance to learn about this profession than our Biology classes at school. Now I know that I want to study medicine in the future!
