VIII. Read the text and answer the questions. (5pts)

My name is Yuko. I work for an American bank in Tokyo, so I speak English every day. I studied English for eight years at school and college, and I use it every day, so my English is OK – but I still find some things difficult. English pronunciation is difficult for me- and for lots of Japanese people. The sound “th” is hard – we don’t have this sound in Japanese. And I find it hard to say “l” and “r”, too. I think people at the bank understand me, though. When I started learning English, I made mistakes with nouns, adjectives, and adverbs – often it’s the same word in Japanese. I don’t make that kind of mistake now, though. English is everywhere in Japan. I read advertisements and everything I see in English. It helps me remember words.
