Car racing is a very exciting sport, but it is also very dangerous. Racing drivers go at 200 kilometers per hour and faster. Sometimes the cars crash and the drivers die.

Kristen Kolby enjoys car racing. When she was a little girl, she and her brother learned to drive go-karts. She loved driving go-karts, and she became good at it. When she was 12, she was the best young driver in her country. Most racing drivers are men. Is this a problem for Kirsten? "Sometimes" is her answer. "Sometimes men don't like a women driver in front of them. They get angry." Is she afraid of crashing?

"I had a bad crash two years ago. The car rolled over. I was under it, and I couldn't move. There was a fire, and I couldn't get out. A man fought through the fire and pulled me out. He was a very brave man. After I came out of hospital, I tried to race again, but I was too afraid. I stopped car racing and got a different job. But I wasn't happy. I wanted to it very much. So, now I'm racing again."
