The Channel Tunnel, one of the most famous in the world, is a 50 km tunnel under the English Channel at the Strait of Dover. The tunnel links Great Britain and France, and it runs for 39 km under the sea. It has the longest undersea portion of any other tunnel in the world. The "Chunnel," as it is often called, is really made up of three tunnels: two are used for trains and the third serves as a service tunnel or an emergency escape route.

The Channel Tunnel was one of the largest construction projects of the 20th century and is still considered an engineering marvel. The average depth of the tunnel is 50 meters below the seabed, but the lowest point is 75 meters deep. The tunnel was officially opened by Queen Elizabeth II and President Francois Mitterrand in 1990. Today, an average of 400 trains pass through the tunnel every day, carrying over 50,000 passengers. The trip takes around 35 minutes.

If your European travel plans include visits to London and Paris, you might prefer to take a high-speed train ride through the tunnel from one city to another, rather than crossing the Channel by ferry or booking a flight. Wouldn't you like to experience traveling under the seabed? You can buy either one-way or round-trip tickets and fares vary depending on the class you prefer: premier class, which includes a three-course meal and a drink, comfort or first class, which includes a snack and a drink, or economy class.
