RELATIONSHIPS

A student talks about her relationship problem and is given advice from counsellor. Read and choose the best answer for the questions that follow.

Jessica: I really like a boy in my class. He's very good-looking, kind and humorous. He is on good terms with everyone. I think every girl in my class adores him. I feel stressed because I think I am not pretty at all. I don't know how to start a conversation with him. I'm always nervous when he's near me.

Counsellor: I understand your feelings. Don't worry. I think he can be a good friend. Now you need to be confident and try to build a friendship with him. As for me, a girl's true value not only lies in her appearance, but also in her achievements, her contributions to the community and her personality as well. I don't think it's only girls' appearance that makes boys pay attention to them. If you study hard, become an excellent student and treat others kindly, he may notice you. One more thing is that girls are more beautiful when they know how to take care of themselves. Thus, you shouldn't keep in your mind that you're not adorable. You will be pretty in his eyes because of your own identity and your confidence.

HELP YOUR COMMUNITY

Trang and Mary are talking about unforgettable moments that they had when participating in programmes for the disabled. Read and choose the best answer for the questions that follow.

Trang: I developed my passion for doing charity after my first trip to a special centre for impaired children. The centre takes care of kids with mental and physical disabilities and tries to prepare them for an independent life by the time they reach eighteen. At first, I didn't know how I would behave around mentally disabled children, but gradually, I fell in love with the kids. They were all so hilarious that just being around them made you feel so happy. I enjoy every moment playing with them, and I hope I can give them more support.

Mary: Well, my experience at centres for children with impairments is one of the most precious memories in my life. I enjoy teaching those children English and feel pleased to hear them sing English songs along with me. Those little angles are so wonderful that every time I'm down, I think of them to lift my spirits. I still remember a gorgeous girl named Nhung at Ba Vi Orphanage. Though she is visually impaired, she is determined to become an English teacher who can help other people with impairments like her. Nhung is now teaching English at Ba Vi Orphanage. She always tries to inspire children and get them involved in her fun and creative learning activities.
