3. On land, amphibians breathe through their ☐☐☐☐☐.
In water, they breathe through their moist ☐☐☐☐.

4. Amphibians reproduce by laying ☐☐☐☐. Their body temperature changes with the surroundings.

Birds

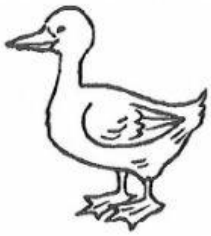

5. Birds have (a) as their body coverings. They also have a pair of (b) that allow them to fly. They eat by using their (c).

Eagles, ducks and sparrows are examples of birds.

Eagle

Duck

Sparrow

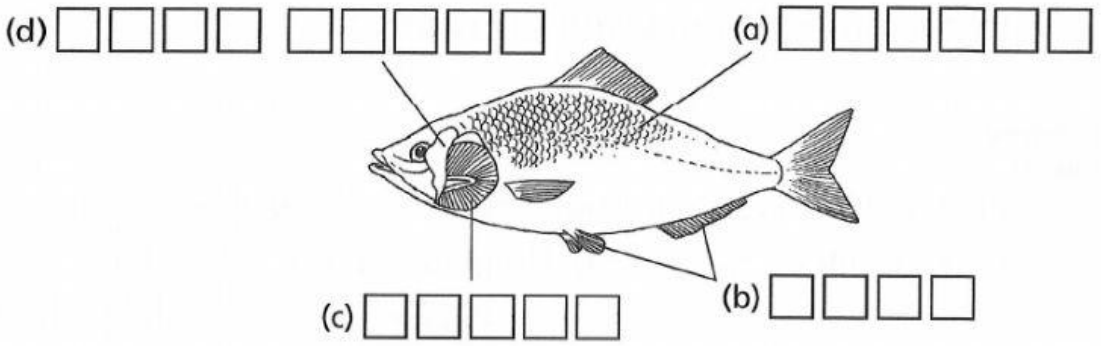

6. Birds reproduce by laying ☐☐☐☐. Their body temperature does not change with the surroundings.

© Educational Publishing House Pte Ltd

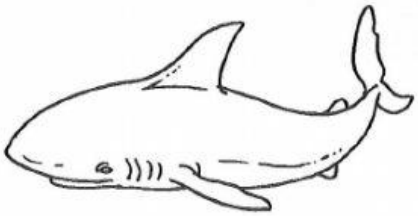

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Fish

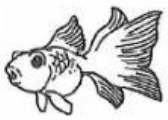

7. Fish live in water. They have (a) as their body coverings and (b) to help them swim. They breathe through (c), which are protected by (d). Their body temperature changes with the surroundings.

Sharks, seahorses and goldfish are examples of fish.

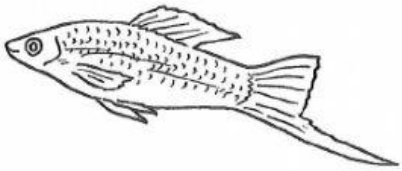

Shark

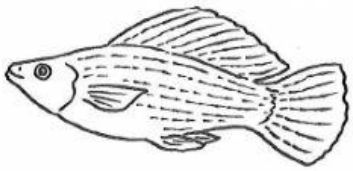

Seahorse

Goldfish

8. Fish reproduce by laying ☐☐☐☐.

The swordtails and mollies are some examples of unusual fish that give birth to live young.

Swordtail

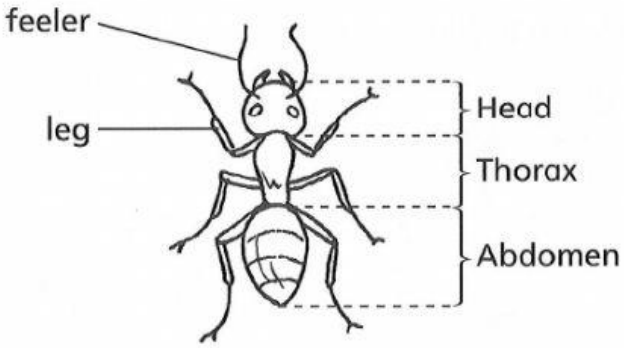

Molly

© Educational Publishing House Pte Ltd

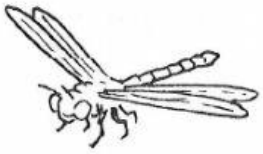

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Insects

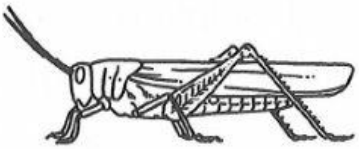

9. Insects have ☐☐☐ legs and a ☐☐☐☐ of feelers. Their bodies are divided into ☐☐☐☐☐ parts, which are the head, thorax and abdomen.

Dragonflies, grasshoppers and mosquitoes are examples of insects.

Dragonfly

Grasshopper

Mosquito

10. Insects have a hard ☐☐☐☐☐ covering and reproduce by laying ☐☐☐☐. Their body temperature changes with the surroundings.

Mammals

11. Mammals have fur or ☐☐☐☐ as their body coverings. Their body temperature does not change with the surroundings.

© Educational Publishing House Pte Ltd

LIVEWORKSHEETS

12. Most mammals give ☐☐☐☐☐ to live young. They produce ☐☐☐☐ to feed their young.

Some mammals such as the spiny anteaters and platypuses reproduce by laying eggs.

Spiny anteater

Platypus

13. Humans, tigers and koalas are examples of mammals that live on ☐☐☐☐. Dolphins, whales and seals are examples of mammals that live in ☐☐☐☐☐.

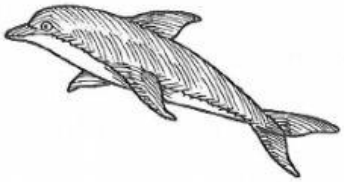

Human

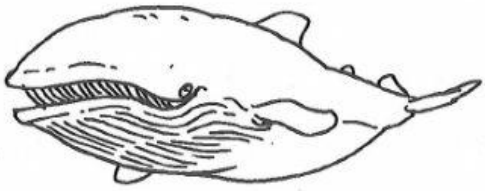

Tiger

Koala

Dolphin

Whale

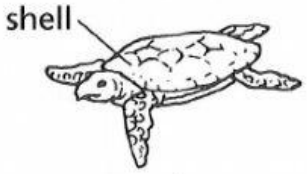

Seal

© Educational Publishing House Pte Ltd

LIVEWORKSHEETS

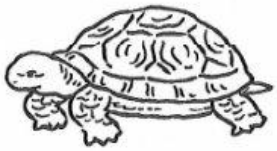

Reptiles

14. Reptiles have dry skin that is covered with ☐☐☐☐☐☐. Some of them, such as turtles, have ☐☐☐☐☐☐ for protection.

Turtle

Tortoises, snakes and lizards are examples of reptiles.

Tortoise

Snake

Lizard

15. Reptiles reproduce by laying ☐☐☐☐.

16. Reptiles breathe through ☐☐☐☐☐. Their body temperature changes with the surroundings.

3.3 Importance of animals

1. Animals depend on one another for their survival. For example, tigers feed on deer. If the deer in a region are removed, the tigers may have no ☐☐☐☐ and starve.

2. We should show care, concern and respect for animals. Like us, animals have needs, which are air, ☐☐☐☐☐ and food, and can feel pain.

© Educational Publishing House Pte Ltd

LIVEWORKSHEETS