The Greatest Vacation Ever

Last December, my family and I went on the most amazing holiday to Spain. Dad said he wanted to get away from the cold and soak up some sun. Mum couldn't come along because her Auntie Cassie was ill. It was just Dad, my brother Jim and myself.

When we arrived at the villa, it was baking hot. First, Dad ran off to take a shower. He said he needed to cool off after such a long journey. There was a swimming pool, so we spent a lot of time splashing about in the water or dousing Dad with water!

The next afternoon, we went to visit some caves in the hills. I was fascinated by the stalagmites and stalactites inside the cave. They were knobbly and looked like massive, misshapen spears. By the end of the tour, we were all ready for a bit of sun and an ice cream.

On our last day there, we visited The Bogatell Beach. The waves were just right for surfing so we hired some surfboards. Dad was mortified that we would drown so he spent the afternoon standing in the sea watching us. It was a breeze! The waves were strong enough to float in on but not too powerful.

When we finally got home, we were overjoyed to show Mum the photos. Dad promised we'd visit Spain next year and I just can't wait to go back!
