English: An Official Language of Singapore

Asher Wong, April 25th

English is one of the four official languages used in Singapore.

It is a small Asian country with few natural resources and so has to do business with many other countries. In 1959, Singapore decided to use English as an official language because English was the most important language for international business. The government believed using English could help Singapore become one of the most developed economies in the world. Today, it is used as the official language in politics, business, education, science and technology.
